Stop the Damage of Carpenter Bees!

Q What looks sort of like a large bumble bee that buzzes around your wooden porch, patio deck, or the eaves of your home and makes holes in your wood deck or wood trim?

A It's a pest called a carpenter bee that can cause serious damage by boring holes in a wide range of softwoods and hardwoods. Favorite nesting places are eaves, decks, fence posts, siding, porches, fascia boards, and window frames.

THE REASON carpenter bees are pests is that they drill holes about 1/2 inch in diameter and then build a tunnel about six inches long where they lay their eggs. Carpenter bees especially like wood that is weathered or unpainted, and they will often return to the same spot year after year. Over a period of several years, they can expand these tunnels to up to ten feet!

Porches are a favorite place of carpenter bees.

Dayton's goal is to provide you with professional pest control services that prevent carpenter bees from damaging your home. Some signs to look for are small holes in the exterior wood around your home, deck, or porch with piles of sawdust beneath them. Another indication that you may have a problem is if you notice that a wood area is stained with a yellow/brown color. This results from pollen that carpenter bees carry into the tunnel to feed their young.
